TRY OUR CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE

Melt 4 ozs. Chocolate in Double Boiler

Grate or chip 4 ounces of chocolate, melt in double boiler; add cup of sugar, 1/2 cup milk, 1 egg and 2 teaspoons vanilla; mix well and let beil until thick. Let this cool to the temperature of the

> Beat 3 Egg Whites with Blue-Streak Beater

Add the yolks of the eggs to thoroughly creamed butter and pigar (1/2 cup butter, 1 cup sugar) and beat well. To this mixture add 1/2. cup of milk.

Sift 2 Cups Flour with Duplex Sifter

Sift cake flour three times and measure after sifting. Add 2 teaspoons of baking powder to the 2 well-sifted cups of flour, and gradually sift into cake mixture.

Fold Batter Lightly with Scotchman's Spoon

To this batter add the cooled chocolate mixture. Next fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites of the 3 eggs.

Pour the Cake Batter Into 3 Layer Pans with Removable Bottoms

Use the carefully fashioned sides of the Scotchman's spoon to remove batter from sides of bowl-Scotchman's spoons have been especially shaped for that purpose. Bake cake in moderate oven from 30 to 35 minutes.

Turn Layers Out on Handy Cake Racks

Have cold fudge icing ready to put on cake while still hot. If icing runs too freely, allow cake to become cooler before icing.

Spread Icing with a Blunt Spatula

To make cold icing: Take I pound XXXX sugar, break into it a good tablespoonful of butter, add gradually enough hot milk to make a thick paste-just soft enough to spread. Stir into this paste 4 ounces of melted chocolate and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

Even with an efficient "Mandy" in the kitchen, it's a satisfaction to surprise Dad and the boys, say, with their favorite chocolate cake of your own making. Ten to one, there can be no surprise dishes for the girls of the family—the new kitchen gadgets lure them too frequently into the kitchen. This game of gadgets is domesticating more young daughters than all the old-fashioned admonitions.
